Dear Mr Streeting,

I am writing to express our appreciation for your clear and principled response following the destruction of emergency ambulances serving the Jewish community.

Your statement that the Jewish community should not be left to bear the cost of this attack is both morally right and nationally important. Ambulances exist to save life — irrespective of background — and to target them is to cross a profound moral line. Such acts are not merely criminal; they strike at the shared values that underpin our society.

We are grateful for the Government's commitment to replace the destroyed vehicles and for your recognition that this is not an issue for the Jewish community alone, but one that concerns the country as a whole. Your words send an important message: That hatred will not be normalised, and that those who dedicate themselves to saving life will be supported and protected.

At the same time, we would respectfully emphasise the importance of ensuring that those responsible are identified and prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law. A firm and visible response is essential in maintaining public confidence and in deterring further acts of this nature.

We would welcome the opportunity to engage further with you and your department on ensuring the safety and resilience of community-based emergency services, which play a vital role within British civic life.

Thank you again for your leadership on this matter.

Yours sincerely,
